Roundtable Report

A Letter from the Executive Director

Welcome back to all who have spent the summer recharging and those who have continued to serve young people and their families. Without you, schools would be less prepared and able to achieve their objectives of fostering the academic success and healthy development of Boston students.

The Roundtable staff have been planning, conducting trainings, and strengthening our ability to build the capacity of community resources and schools to partner together. Look for a new improved website that contains a toolkit of best practices, research, and tools at the end of September; a Meet the Funders gathering conducted in conjunction with the BPS Development office in November; and our first Roundtable meeting of the year on Monday, October 23rd, 9:00 - 11:30 AM at the Boston Foundation. More details to follow.

We look forward to reconnecting with you. Please do not hesitate to reach out to us if we can be of any assistance.

On behalf of Boston's young people, wishing us all a successful year ahead,

Marta Gredler

What's Happening in BPS

Interim Superintendent Contompasis sets agenda for new school year at three-day institute for school leaders

Boston Public Schools (BPS) Interim Superintendent Michael Contompasis welcomed the 145 school principals and headmasters back for a new academic year at the start of the annual three-day institute for school leaders, held at Boston College. Contompasis, a 40-year veteran educator and former Headmaster of Boston Latin School, emphasized that he expects the district's education reform work to continue and accelerate under his leadership. Highlighting the role that school leaders play in helping close the achievement gap and in moving all students to proficiency, Contompasis said that their leadership is vital. "As principals and headmasters, you set the tone for the relationships in your buildings," he said. "We are committed to providing you

"We have made great progress," he said, "but we still have a long way to go. Every one of us - in schools, central offices and the community - has to work even harder to provide all children in this district with opportunities to reach their full potential."

boston history & innovation collaborative

New from the Boston Children's Museum for BPS classrooms!

What's The Big Idea? A play that can go to your school

What's The Big Idea? is a short, interactive play based on Grade 3 history/social science frameworks about innovators - including microwave inventor Percy Spencer, first published Black poet Phillis Wheatley, and computer terminal developer An Wang - in Boston history. The play, featuring professional actors

"We all have a stake in our children's future. Working together to ensure access to quality health care is a key way to give kids the best chance to succeed. Health Care For All and each of our regional partners look forward to collaborating with communities to spread the word on children's health care, and welcome new organizational partners to this effort," John McDonough, Executive Director of Health Care For All.

"ASCD advocates a balanced curriculum that acknowledges the multiple dimensions that comprise a well-educated citizen. We believe that we need to expand the definition of education - and of what gets measured in education - to include more than academic competence. We need to identify the shared responsibilities of health, the arts, social welfare and other systems on young adults' potential."
ASCD Leadership Council

and sets, will travel to 30 lucky Greater Boston elementary schools next year for $100 (free for Title I Schools).

Funded by a grant from the Yawkey Foundation to the Boston History & Innovation Collaborative, What's the Big Idea? is written and directed by City Stage Co. and is a collaboration with Boston Children's Museum.

Visit <http://www.bostonkids.org/educators/about.html> to download an application to have the play performed in your school as part of the 2006-07 tour.

MAJOR NATIONAL EDUCATION ORGANIZATION CONSIDERS COMMUNITY SCHOOLS

One more sign that people are beginning to think more comprehensively about what it takes to educate our children is the new Commission on the Whole Child convened by the Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development (ASCD). As part of their work, they asked the Coalition for Community Schools to prepare a paper, another good sign for the visibility of community schools.

All Together Now: Sharing Responsibility for the Whole Child, written by Coalition staff Marty Blank and Amy Berg is now available on the ASCD website. www.ascd.org/ASCD/pdf/sharingresponsibility.pdf
